THE PRO

Everyone's story of how they found themselves in a certain job is unique. Richard Siever's of Richard Siever's Home Repair in Las Vegas is no different.

"I was in the Postal Service for 20 years before I started working with my dad. He was in construction about 40 years. When I started I didn't know anything so I was left to do all the sweeping, shoveling, cleaning, but was running things a couple years later. Eventually, I took some time off...

like ten months...and then came back to work for myself."

With those years of experience working with his father, it didn't take long for Richard's company to be a success when he went out on his own.

"I printed off some business cards and off I went. I just love the freedom to be your own boss, and I like seeing the final product when I build a house or do a remodel and see how people decorate their homes...kind of puts the icing on the cake."

THE PORCH / LOWE'S EFFECT

To go along with his grassroots marketing, Richard wasn't having much luck with other lead generating companies, so when he saw a Porch sign in his local Lowe's, he couldn't help but be skeptical. Still, he took a shot.

"It's been a positive experience and I look forward to better things. I've booked two great jobs which covered my subscription by a good amount, and am now lining up a third that has the potential to be an ongoing gig. And the quality of leads are just so great. I go see people for work and they just seem more ready to go than with other customers."

Porch's partnership with Lowe's has also been a major part of Richard's confidence in the Porch program, and his loyalty to Lowe's has strengthened since becoming a Porch Pro. "I used to shop at other home improvement stores, but now I tell all my customers to go to Lowes. If they don't see it on the shelf, I tell them to tell me and between myself and an associate, we'll make sure they get what they need. I'm much more loyal and spend more at Lowe's these days, and that's definitely due to Porch."
